
Arjun Rampal has stepped into the limelight yet again with his latest release, Inkaar. The movie received a great response from audiences and critics alike. Arjun plays Rahul Verma—CEO of an advertising company—and his incredible performance has struck the right chord with the audiences, so much so that they are talking about him winning the National award yet again.

‘Inkaar’ revolves around the instances of sexual harassment in the workplace and portrays a few hushed truths of the corporate world. In the film, Arjun has sunk into the character of the part-mentor part-tormentor well enough to win the hearts of moviegoers and critics alike. He reflects the character of a sensitive, somewhat arrogant, yet considerate individual with ease. Digital platforms have been raving about his character and how effortlessly he slips into it.
Social media platforms including the micro-blogging site, Twitter, have been flooded with posts showering Arjun with praises. One of the many tweets read, “@rampalarjun i watched @InkaarTheFilm 2de and m spell bound! Loved ur performance! Ur defntly going to bag the National Award for this one! (sic).”

Arjun has evolved with every film to the point that nowadays a film featuring him is seen as an assurance of innovative aesthetics. It goes without saying that Arjun Rampal is a strong contender for yet another National Award after Rock On (Best Supporting Actor, 2008).
