Acting maestro Boman Irani who will be seen essaying a role of a politician in the upcoming hugely anticipated 'Bhoothnath Returns' opposite Amitabh Bachchan recently turned scriptwriter for a scene in the movie we hear!

The duo will be sharing screen space after 8 years in the entertaining tale, and there is one riveting scene where Boman Irani aka Bhau is seemingly attacked by Bhoothnath (who of course is invisible and can't be seen) during a press conference!

Director Nitesh Tiwari didn't have a script for this particular scene and he conveyed the same to Boman, describing the scene and the situation. He gave Boman the freehand to enact the scene and render dialogues as per his wish!

Boman then reportedly the director to give him half an hour, post which he came on the set and gave such a physically phenomenal performance, that the entire team was speechless!!

He slapped himself, kicked, shouted, yelled and created such an act that it actually felt to the crew like an invisible personality was torturing the actor!

Says a source from the set, "It is very difficult to convincingly slap oneself and be physically violent to one own self and also maintain dialogues with stable tenor and strong voice delivery. Boman not only gathered the physical energy to hit himself but also gave the dialogues perfectly!"
