Richa Chadha is one actress who has never believed in doing the same kind of things. From playing a pseudo - Godmother in Gangs of Wasseypur to essaying the role of a spunky don in Fukrey, Richa has slipped comfortably in each of the roles.

The actress will now be seen in the play 'Trivial Disasters' alongside Kalki Koechlin, Purab Kohli and Cyrus Sahukar. Directed by Atul Kumar, the play features 8 situations which highlight human absurdities. This humorous play will travel throughout India after it opened in Bangalore on 25th of July. The play will also be featured in cities such as Lucknow, Hyderabad, Chennai, Patna, Mumbai etc. The actress was not very keen on taking up this play as she wanted to focus on her upcoming movie – Main aur Charles. It so happened that the actress was in New York sometime back and wanted see Denzel Washington perform in a play. As luck would have it, the play was Houseful and she had to coax out the tickets from her friend. At that point in time she was still contemplating if she should take up 'Trivial Disasters.' Turns out, she was so inspired by Denzel Washington's performance, that she then decided to challenge herself and take up the play.
