Amitabh Bachchan, who has undergone several image makeovers for his various roles, recently surprised his fans by posting a picture of his new Taaqat Ka Bhoot avatar on his blog.

Big B has donned this look for the new campaign of energy health drink Complian. The picture shows Bachchan Senior in a 'ninjash' garb, as he sports white boots, long white locks and a white cape.

The Shahenshah of Bollywood gave out details about his look and the campaign on his blog writing, "The imagery in white and somewhat 'ninjash' mop has given me even greater reason to remain at home. Some of the negative comments after a preliminary draft of this, were surprised at the common and final outcome."

"It's the Taaqat ka Bhooth for the engagement as a celebrity endorsement to a product called 'COMPLAN'. The concept of this outlandish clothing was the handiwork of the many stylists that now occupy the space so generously accorded to not just cinema, but the varied other efforts that require a band a stage and a tentative entertainment platform or stage ...," he further added.

"I was very hesitant to put this up for fear of it being run down ... but ... my reasoning on this was that, a great amount of good work was being planned, by others, so there was the reason that I went to in the Reliance Studios and did greater and more valid work ...," he concluded.
