Another key highlight of the film is its music, which for the first time in Marathi cinema, would feature none other than Leslie Lewis. Other credits include Producer and Costumes by Deepti Talpade, story and dialogues by Sameer Patil, screenplay by Sameer Patil and Charudatt Bhagwat, and cinematographer by Pushpank Gawde. 'Poshter Boyz' is slated for a 1st august 2014 release.

Poshter Boyz' hits the funny notes right from the opening scene, with a very quirky exchange between the three principle characters. The trailer goes on to establish, how the fates of three different men are brought together by one vasectomy poster they are featured upon. The struggle of the three men and the constant roadblocks they face to redeem their respect and position, has been well captured. The humor of the film and the theatrical are drawn from the desperation of situations rather than veering towards slapstick interventions. The trailer also gives a sneak peak of the much awaited foot-tapping music of the film. All in all the theatrical is looking great and gives away just about enough to get the curiosity going and leave the audience wanting more.
