Priyanka Chopra was clicked at an event held to launch the video of her international single In My City. At the event, Priyanka Chopra talked about her upcoming film, a biopic on Mary Kom, and said: "I am training for it at the moment and it will take me that much time to come into shape. We would start shooting for the film from June.

I wanted to give it an Indian flavour in terms of dancing. I wanted the world to see what Bollywood is all about," Priyanka told reporters at the unveiling of the single In My City here.

I wanted that the identity of the song should be Indian. I am very India-proud. When people see my video, they must feel that Bollywood is like this," she said.

Talking about her style, she said it's a fusion and amalgamation which will be enjoyed in west and India.

I showed the video to my dad first. He is not well and has been in the hospital for a while now. He really liked it, especially the Namaste which I do," she said.

Priyanka also revealed she would like to sing for her own films. "This is just the beginning. I am waiting for the entire album to come out," she said.
