One of the most anticipated movies of 2014, Humshakals, a Sajid Khan directorial is all set to unleash total madness and confusion in the triple roles and promises to be a laugh riot!!

Having shot the movie extensively abroad, Sajid promises to discover some never seen locations through the movie. The audiences have always known Sajid Khan for doing something unique and out-of-the-box for his films.

Keeping the Houseful franchise in mind, Sajid Khan has yet another common factor with Humshakals! Yes, the movie has been shot in extensively in England!

A source close from the production team says, "We believe that the locations in the movie are like a silent character. After doing a reeve of about 100 castles in England and Scotland, Sajid's mom suggested that we should go ahead with The Chatsworth House."

But well, that's not it! The location manager informed Sajid that it would be impossible to shoot in The Chatsworth House, as it is the major tourist attraction!

"Sajid was very determined that we wanted to shoot in the Chatsworth House, hence he agreed on an hourly breakdowns wherein we were allowed to shoot in a part of the house which would be locked down each day for certain hours," continues the source.
