Movie Preview Jai Ho : Jai, an upright common man is fighting a solitary war against corruption and injustice. Honest and incorruptible, he has made it his mission to help as many people as he can. His mantra is quite simple – help somebody and then request that person to lend a helping hand to somebody else –thus forming an ever growing circle of people helping each other.

In a strange twist of fate, he finds himself pitted against a powerful politician and his vile family. Jai who is an ex army officer, will not shy away from a battle, however bloody it may get and firmly believes that you do not have to wear an uniform to serve your country. As the politician unleashes his violent goons on brave heart Jai, Geeta, Jai's sister, realizes the horrific consequences this can have on her brother and the rest of their family.

She persuades a reluctant Jai to make peace with the politician. But when this leads to humiliation being heaped on him, Jai loses his cool and declares all out war. It is an unequal war – on side stand the politician with his numerous henchmen and on one side is Jai – alone.

But unknown to him, a silent revolution is taking place. The voiceless public, he has helped in the past, is gathering force. It finally has a voice and this voice cannot...will not be silenced.

Because Jai Ho is the resounding sound of victory...Jai Ho is the warrior cry of someone determined to win at all cost..

Music: The album is strictly for Salman fans as there is hardly any musical gratification to be found. Baaki sab first class hai is the best of the lot and the race for the least appealing song is a tremendously hard-fought competition. Yes, there is a certain variety to be found but that's about it as far as true value is concerned. All in all, if you're a Salman fan you've already bought your cd and you won't care.

Critical Response: Film will receive average to good reviews as such films do get good reviews based on social issue but then Salman is not favorite of majority of critics. Still Salman does not need any star for the film as he is the biggest star himself, critics take a walk!

Final Verdict: Film should take huge to historic start due to Salman factor and but film needs to have great reception at box office as film has no holiday advantage after 26th January which is
