Youngistaan Movie Preview

Director:Syed Ahmad Fazal

Starring:Jacky Bhagnani, Neha Sharma, Farooque Sheikh

It is essentially a love story set in the backdrop of Indian politics, is the story of Abhimanyu Kaul - a young, independent, Games Developer, living in Japan with the love of his life, Anwita Chauhan - a bubbly, passionate and full of life, summer intern.

Their happy and content life faces the test of time, when blood ties and the pressure of being born into the first family of India tears a young Abhimanyu between his love for Anwita and a promise made to his dying father, the Prime Minister of India.

Being a public figure, by reluctantly accepting to represent the governing party, much against his own wishes and at the cost of his private life, is a double-edged sword that Abhimanyu must walk on. Much like the crests and troughs of any political survey, the film follows the highs and lows of Abhimanyu's life - From a young boy, living an ordinary life in Japan, to the designate Prime Minister of the biggest democracy in the world. The film travels with Abhimanyu, as he becomes the Prime Minister of India and struggles to balance his personal relationship with Anwita on one hand and the political resistance against him from within his party, on the other.

Thought of as an amateur and incapable of handling the issues at large by one and all, (except the ever faithful Akbar Patel, Secretary to the P.M), the film closes as a victorious Abhimanyu changes the course of events and turns the tide his way, through his hard work, honestly, and above all, a political legacy - a sharp, leading mind that not everyone inherits!

Music: All the composers have done a great job choosing fresh youthful and vibrant music, and the album has hit written all over it. 'Suno-Na Sangemarmar', 'Daata Di Diwani', and 'Youngistaan Anthem' are our picks. The chartbusting album will surely aid the film opening to a decent to good response when it releases all over on 28th March, 2014.

Critical Response Film will receive good to very good reviews because film has novel theme, hit music, good ensemble cast and interesting promos. Film should impress critics.

Final Verdict: Film will have to fight two other new releases 'O Teri' and 'Dishkiyaon'. Film will get decent release in around 800 screens and should lead over the weekend
