Aamir Khan and Svati Chakravarty (co director of SMJ) on Sunday visited IIT Powai to see the episode with 1500 students.

It was a packed house and the discussion majorly revolved around how individually what could we do to make a difference.

While lots of students asked lot of relevant questions and the session went on for more than hour. However Aamir was most impressed by Honey Singh, a student merely in the 7th standard who is huge fan of the show SMJ and Aamir Khan.

He asked Aamir that, what kind of difficulties the actor faced during the making of all the episodes. Honey's question was, what kind of pressure from administration or politics or any other group has been experienced by the actor. Aamir was impressed at the insight the kid had.

There were so many professors and students at the discussion who had asked all kind of question but the only one who understood that it may not have been easy for the actor was the small boy who studies in 7th standard.

In response Aamir said that he didn't feel any pressure from political parties or administration. But on and off few people did get upset when they revealed truth about them. The actor was quite amazed by Honey's question to him.
